Waddy FOR SUPERMARKETS & GROCERS

Fresh, the way they'd pick it.

Your shelves, on every phone in Maadi.

Waddy is the grocery app that asks how ripe, and what it's for, so your fresh aisle sells online like it does in store.

Ripeness choice | Salad or cooking | Shop by aisle

WHO WE ARE

In Egypt, “waddy” is what you say when something’s great.

We built a delivery app that has to live up to its own name. One neighborhood, done properly: Maadi’s food, groceries and pet supplies in a single app, brought to the door by riders customers can watch arrive.

Local first

We start with Maadi and the places Maadi already loves. You are a neighbour here, not a row in a national database.

One app, three aisles

Food, groceries and pets live side by side. Someone who opens Waddy for dinner sees your store on the way.

The mint one

Every other delivery app is orange or red. Waddy is mint, so your customers know where they found you.

THE PROBLEM

Nobody trusts a stranger to pick their tomatoes.

01

Fresh is where online grocery breaks

Customers order the packaged goods and still walk to the shop for fruit and vegetables.

02

Wrong ripeness, lost customer

Green bananas for tonight's dessert. Soft tomatoes for a salad. One bad basket and they don't come back.

03

Your picker has to guess

The order says "1 kg tomatoes". It never says what the customer is cooking.

Waddy fixes it with one question, asked before the cart.

ONLY ON WADDY · RIPENESS

Bananas for today.
Or bananas for Thursday.

On fruit, Waddy asks the question a good greengrocer asks across the counter: when are you eating it?

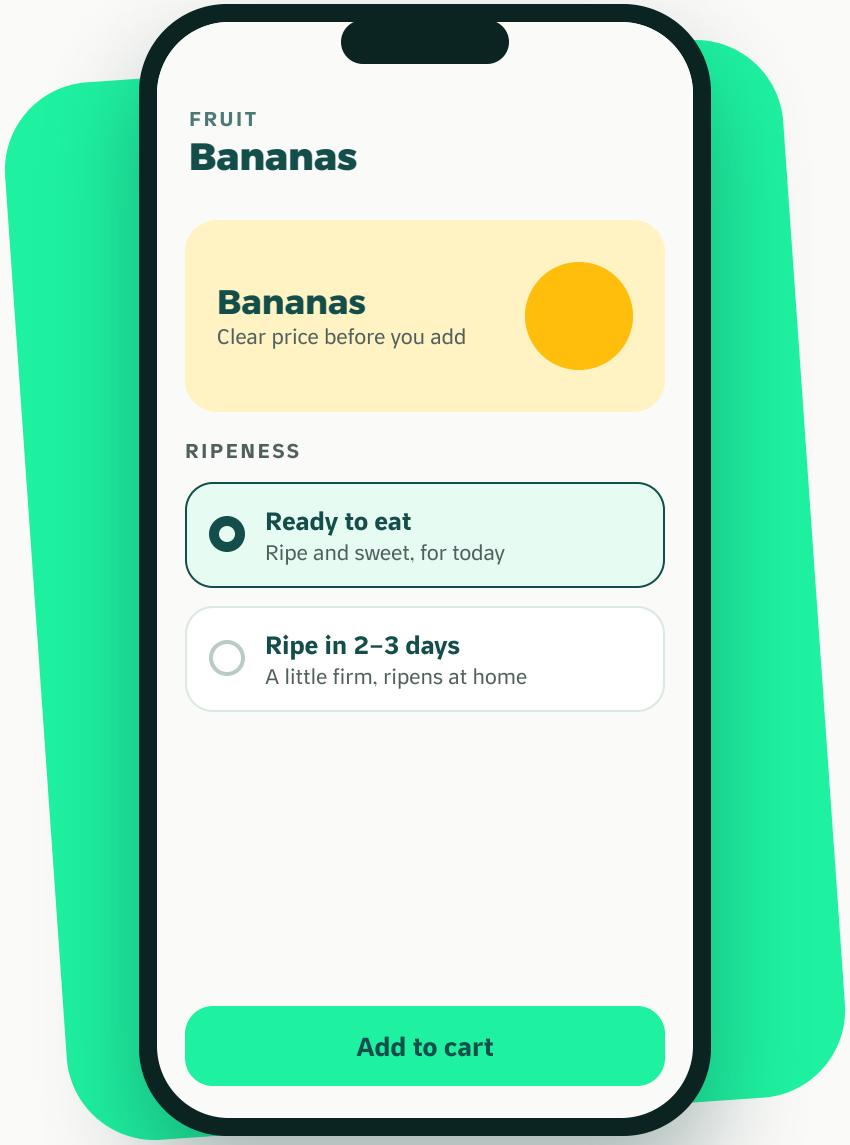

Ready to eat
Ripe and sweet, for today.

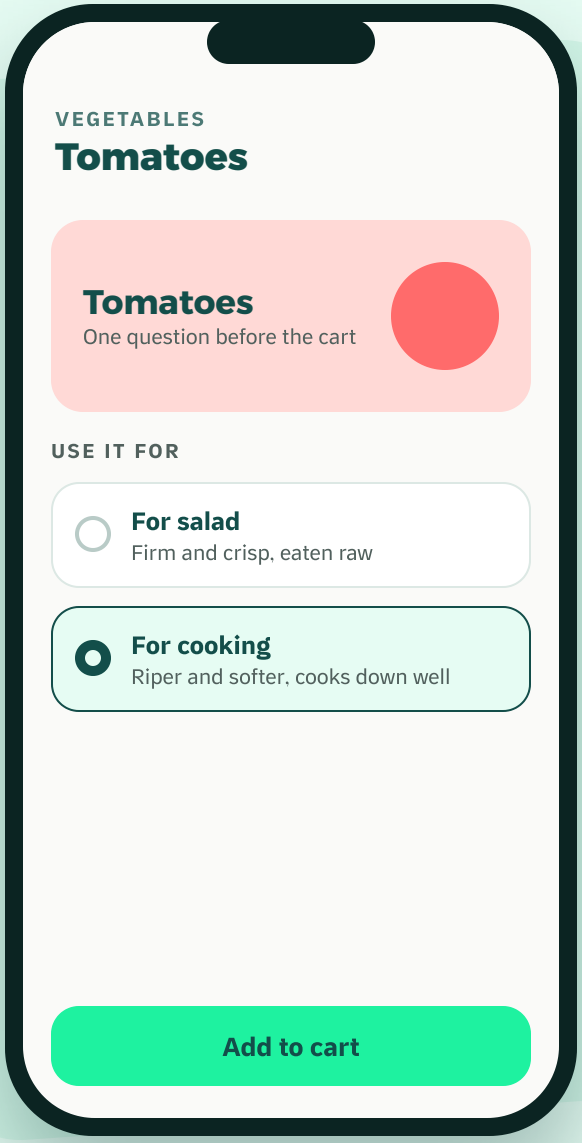

Ripe in 2–3 days
A little firm, ripens at home.

On the categories that need it
Fruit asks about ripeness. Milk and rice ask nothing. Shopping stays fast.

WHAT IT DOES FOR YOU

Customers finally trust you with fruit online, and fruit is what fills a weekly basket.

ONLY ON WADDY · USE IT FOR

Salad tomatoes and sauce tomatoes are not the same tomato.

On vegetables, Waddy asks what they're for. Two answers, and your picker knows exactly which crate to reach into.

For salad
Firm and crisp, eaten raw.

For cooking
Riper and softer, cooks down well.

Sell the whole crate
Softer produce goes to the cooks who want it, instead of being left on the shelf.

WHAT IT DOES FOR YOU

The right vegetable to the right kitchen: fewer complaints for you, less waste on your shelf.

ON YOUR SIDE OF THE COUNTER

One question for them. Zero guessing for you.

The customer's answer travels with the item, all the way to whoever picks the order.

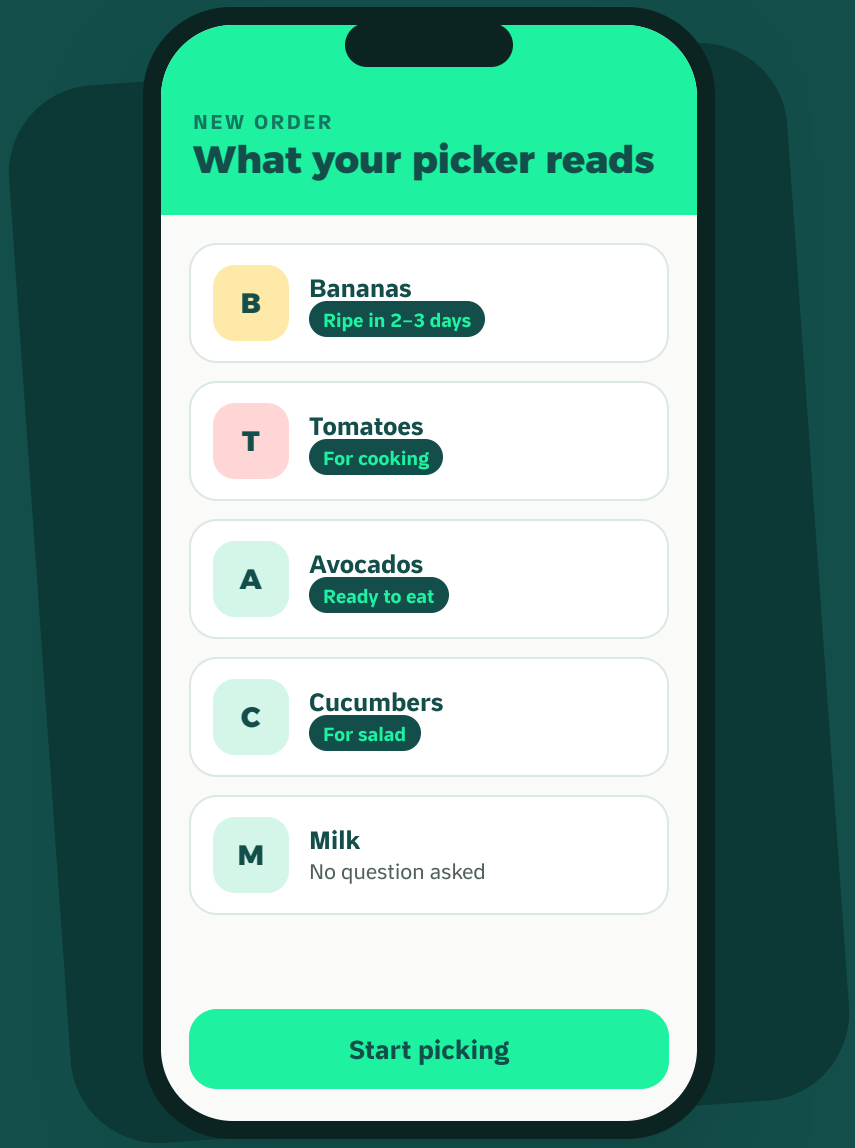

Written on the order line
"Bananas · Ripe in 2–3 days." The instruction sits next to the item it belongs to.

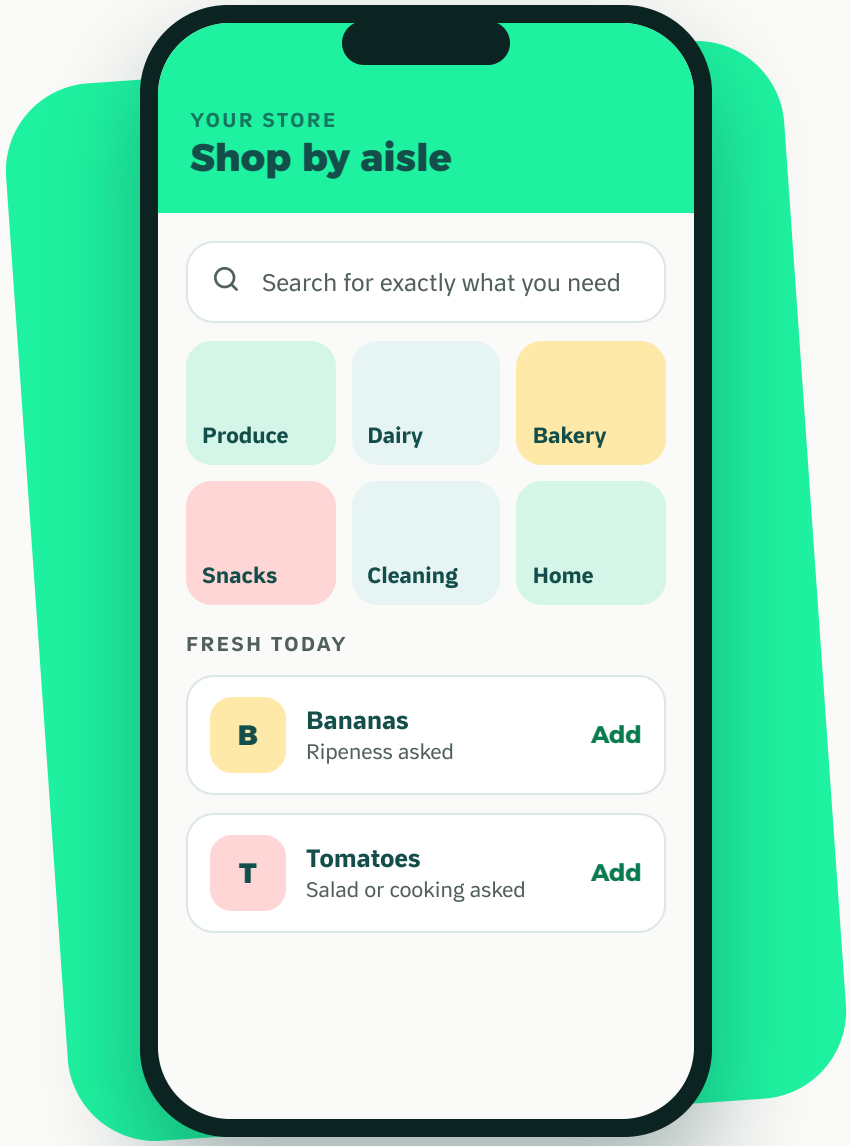

Never touches price or stock
It is a picking note, not a new product. Nothing extra to manage in your catalogue.

The customer must answer
No produce reaches the cart without it, so no order arrives at your store unclear.

WHAT IT DOES FOR YOU

Your team picks like they know the customer, because now they do.

YOUR STORE, ONLINE

The whole shop, aisle by aisle.

Your store on Waddy is laid out the way people already shop it, with nothing hidden until checkout.

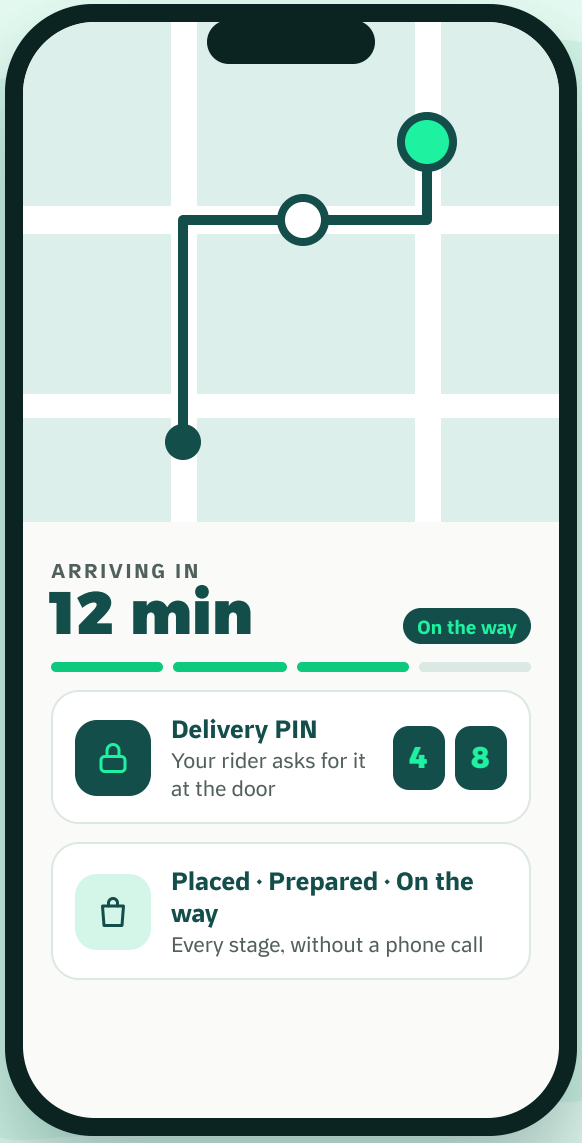

Shop by aisle
Produce, dairy, bakery, snacks, cleaning and home essentials, each with its own shelf.

Search for exactly that
Customers who know what they want find it in one step.

Clear prices before the cart
What they see is what they pay. Trust builds basket by basket.

WHAT IT DOES FOR YOU

Bigger baskets: they came for milk and found the rest of your store.

DELIVERY THEY CAN TRUST

No more “where’s my order?”

Your work ends well when the order arrives well. Fresh food should not sit in a bag while a customer wonders where it is.

A live map, a live ETA
Customers watch their rider cross Maadi instead of calling your shop to ask.

Every stage, shown
Placed, prepared, on the way. They know what is happening before they wonder.

A delivery PIN at the door
The rider asks for it, so the order reaches the right customer and only them.

WHAT IT DOES FOR YOU

Fewer phone calls, fewer disputes, and a last impression as good as your first.

CUSTOMERS WHO COME BACK

Groceries are a habit. Be the habit.

A household that shops with you weekly is worth more than a hundred one-off orders. Waddy rewards the weekly shop.

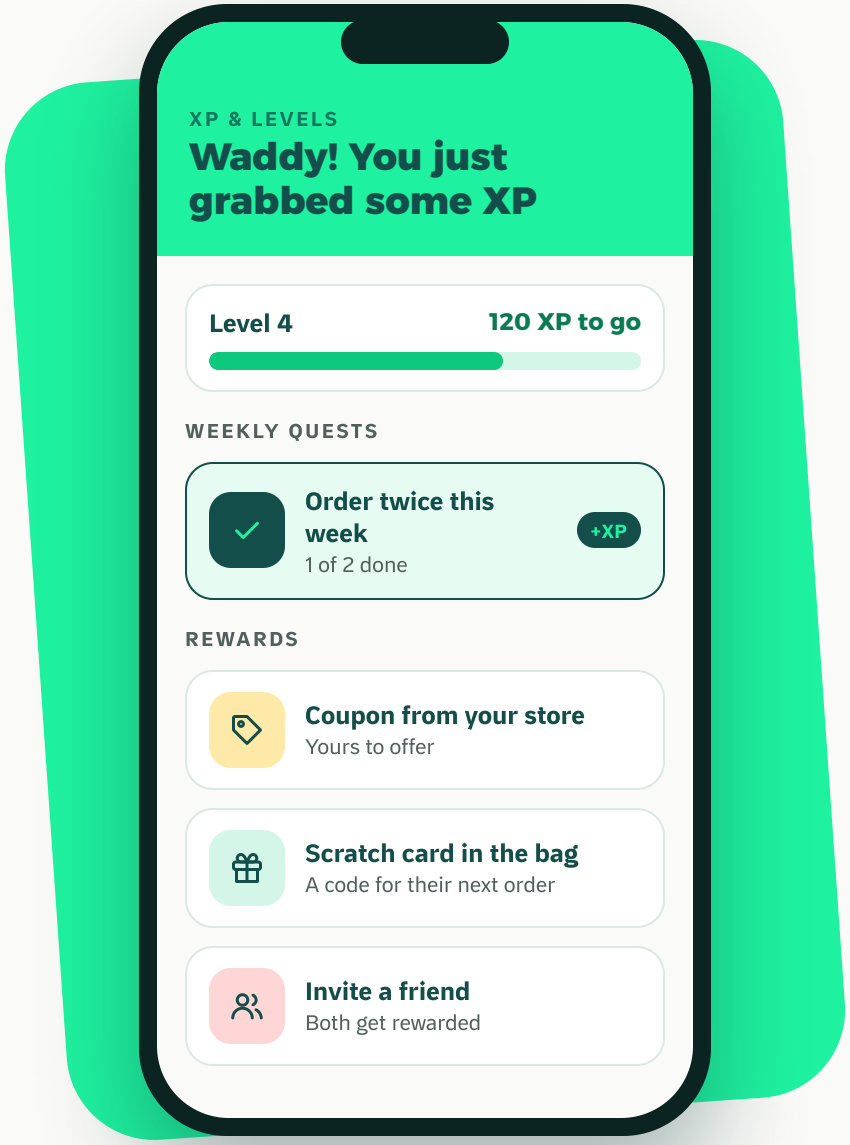

XP on every order
Customers level up as they order, with weekly quests that give them a reason to open Waddy again.

Coupons and offers from your store
Your deals appear on your store before the customer orders, not buried in a banner.

A scratch card in the bag
A printed code in the delivery turns one order into a reason for the next.

WHAT IT DOES FOR YOU

A reason to do the next weekly shop with you, not with whoever is open.
